FELLOW NUMISMATISTS:—

Welcome to our belated MAIL AUCTION SALE No. 89. The trials which delayed the appearance of this catalog bring to mind lines of Robert Burns for, certainly, our plans ganged aft agley all over the place. First, an elusive gremlin moved into our electronic composing machine which type-sets these catalogs. Tracking him down and booting him out took several weeks of down time. Then my secretary, Mrs. Triggs, who prepares these catalogs, took a nasty spill on the ice and was hospitalized. As if that wasn't enough, a fire at home has consumed a great deal of my own time dealing with insurance adjusters and their related ilk. So, January's auction has become April's.

Has the international numismatic market improved noticeably in the interim? Have prospective purchasers cottoned to the fact the foreign coins in particular are selling at true bargain prices? Well, as our old friend and client Captain R.M. Flynt has said, "The market will decide when the market wants to move, and any advice or puffery on the part of a seller remains just that - advice and puffery, until the market decides differently." Which brings us to —

THE PARADOXICAL COINAGE OF ZENO

By Capt. R.M. Flynt, D.S.O., R.N.V.R. (Ret.)

Zeno of Elea (ca. 490 - ca. 430 B.C.), not to be confused with the late Roman Emperor of the same name, was a philosopher of the Eleatic school and follower of Parmenides. He sought to demonstrate that motion and multiplicity are logically impossible. Aristotle recognized him as the first to truly apply the dialectic method. What is less well known about Zeno is his service to the state as moneyor and monetarist economist. In approximately 450 B.C. Zeno recognized the dilemma of his city: After the Pan-Carnatic Wars the region suffered from both inflation and a shortage of circulating coinage for change making brought about by hoarding. He resolved to issue a coinage which would, in effect, make change for itself. Classical numismatists have run across these coins from time to time, but, due to their unusual nature, have often dismissed them as some sort of ancient tally or game counter. The coinage of Zeno was unique in that it deliberately bore a different denomination on each side. The obverse and reverse (or thesis and antithesis as later, Hegelian numismatists might call them) were two different coins struck on the same planchet. Known value combinations are 10 units/ 5 units, 2 units/ 1 unit, and 1 unit/ 1/2 unit. Their use in commerce appeared to be simplicity itself and would resolve the shortage of small change. For example, if one wished to purchase 1/2 unit worth of bread, he slid a 1 unit coin face up across the counter to the baker. The baker turned it over and slid back a 1/2 unit coin along with the bread. A horse selling for 5 units (not a very good horse) would be paid for with a 10 unit coin which the seller would turn over and return as 5 units in change. Counterfeiting posed an annoying but not hopeless problem. The forgers made coins which were 10 units on each side; they could not be used to make change. The system's downfall however, came about by the nervousness of conflicting schools of economists. One school contended that if all the 5 unit coins were flipped over and turned into 10 units, the money supply would double, and inflation would result. The other school maintained that if all the 10 unit coins were flipped over and turned into 5 unit coins, the money supply would be halved, interest rates would skyrocket, and Elea's balance of payments with other cities would be jeopardized. The debate raged back and forth for a protracted period; somehow none of the prophecies of doom came to pass, but just to play it safe, Zeno was executed in 430 B.C., and his novel system of finance which proved that neither multiplicity nor motion could occur remains as nothing but an obscure footnote to numismatics.

- 615 A remarkable collection of over 500 Medals of Ecuador. Almost any imaginable topic is present including heroes of independence, anniversaries, fairs, firemen, railroads, medical medals, etc. There are many, many different athletic medals and many medals for various Banks. Quite a number of unusual and rare hand engraved medals are offered. Many large sized pieces with quite a few in silver and silverplate. While there is some slight duplication, a specialized collection of this scope would be most difficult to duplicate. The overall state of preservation is very high with most pieces being AU-UNC. This group is much more comprehensive than any of the catalogs on Ecuadorean medals and would form the basis for a much better catalog itself. It should bring 5,000.00-7,500.00. Note: This collection weights quite a bit, and shipping charges will be high. PHOTOS (of selected medals)
